REED-TURNER WOODLAND is a 36-acre nature preserve, owned by the Long Grove Park District, in the heart of Long Grove, Illinois.

It is home to a variety of diverse habitats and creatures. It is part of the original "long grove" of oak and hickory trees with foot paths that border the ravines, stream corridor, lake shore and prairies of this unique place.

The Woodland is ideal for birding, photography and other artistic pursuits, observation, and family nature walks during any season of the year.

The Reed-Turner Woodland needs your Support Today!

REED TURNER WOODLAND in southern Lake county has become a living testament to the benefits of land restoration, research, preservation and stewardship.

AS AN ILLINOIS NATURE PRESERVE, we exist for the preservation of the plants and animals that are the living community here.

THE WOODLAND NATURE PRESERVE and the adjacent Woodland Nature Center are owned by the Long Grove Park District. Events can be held in the Center Meeting Room. Volunteers are always needed for various tasks like controlling exotics, plant rescue, trail maintenance and prescribed burn support.

Help preserve this area's survival by your support. This will enable future generations to experience Reed-Turner Woodland.
